

The Utah Water Conservation Forum is organized exclusively for charitable, scientific, and educational purposes. Our mission is to support local, state, and federal water agencies and professionals in sustaining a statewide water conservation movement.

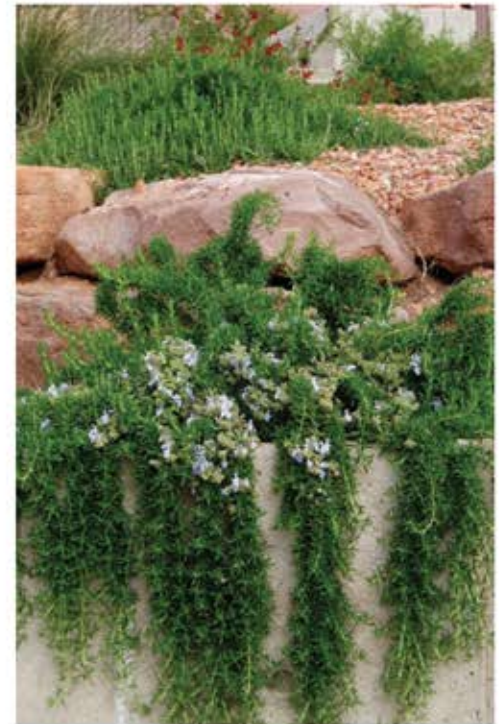

We accomplish this by increasing awareness and knowledge of the principles, methods, and research that promote water conservation and water-use efficiency

Programs

The Utah Water Conservation Forum has brought representatives from the most successful water conservation programs in the nation to annual conferences to share insights, programs, and organizing techniques with water agencies, leaders, managers, policy makers, and individuals.

The Forum's annual workshops address aspects of water conservation education and leadership. We offer incentives, encouragement, and material help to those engaged in public outreach.

Annual tours sponsored by the Forum raise awareness of current local practices and the potential for increasing the beauty of landscapes through appropriate plan material and effective outdoor irrigation methods.

Forum Board members, past and current, have developed a number of popular brochures that are widely distributed through water fairs, schools, the Slow the Flow Water Check program, and other public information venues. With a grant from the US Bureau of Reclamation, the Forum recently completed and began distributing a short how-to video, "It's Easy to Save Water," free to the public. Through the forum's website, members are kept informed of progress toward goals and upcoming events
